Largest social media advertising audiences

Next up, the data published in the respective platforms' ad planning tools indicate that YouTube also has the world's largest social media advertising audience, with the company's latest data pointing to total potential reach of more than 2.53 billion.

That means YouTube's audience is roughly 11 percent larger than that of its next nearest rival, Facebook, with Meta's planning tools indicating global Facebook ad reach of 2.28 billion at the start of 2025.

Top social platform by time spent

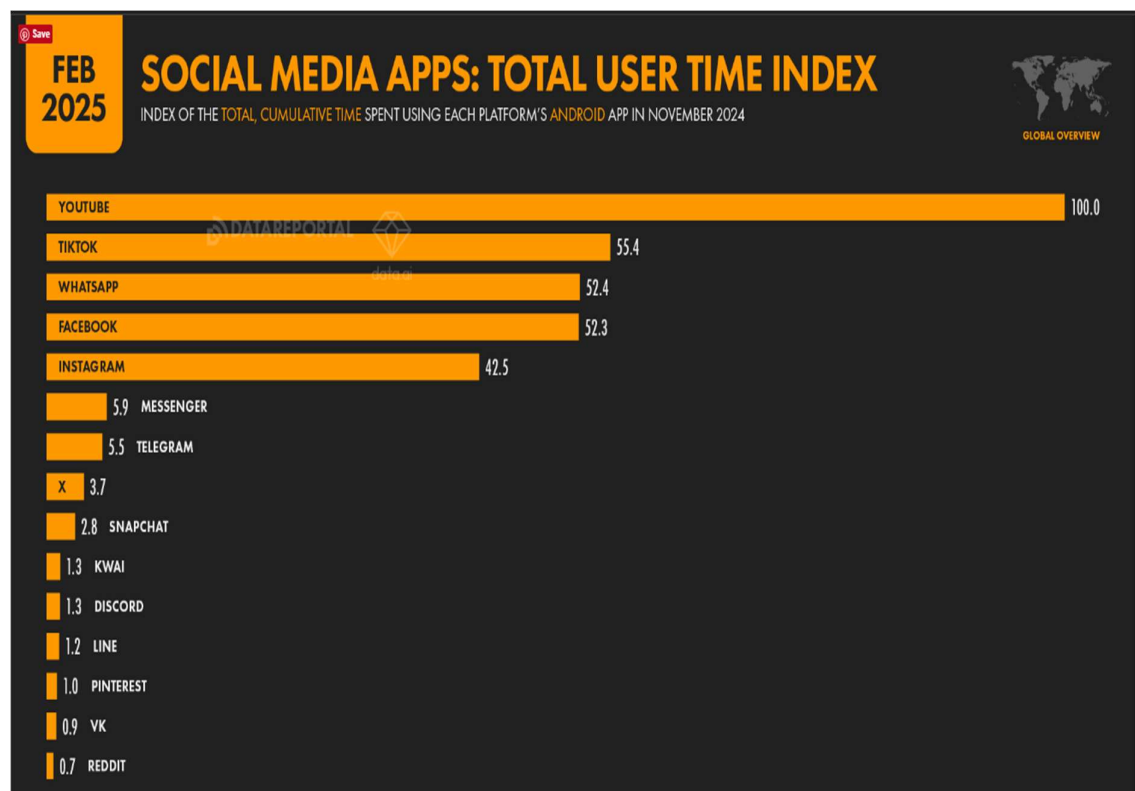

Our complete Digital 2025 Global Overview Report offers various other metrics for comparing social media platforms, but for the purposes of this analysis, we'll finish up with a look at the total time spent "on platform".

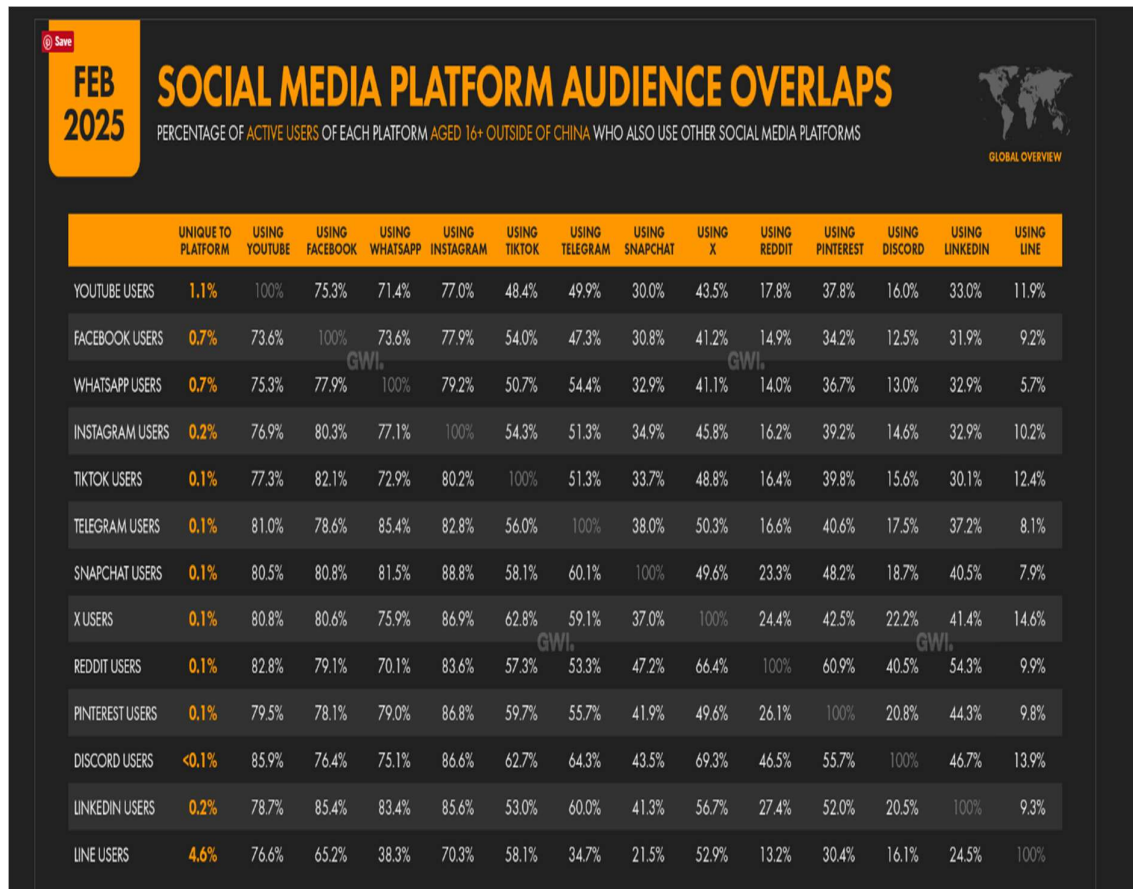

This data is again informed by intelligence from Sensor Tower's data.ai, and it shows that YouTube takes the lion's share of the world's social media time.

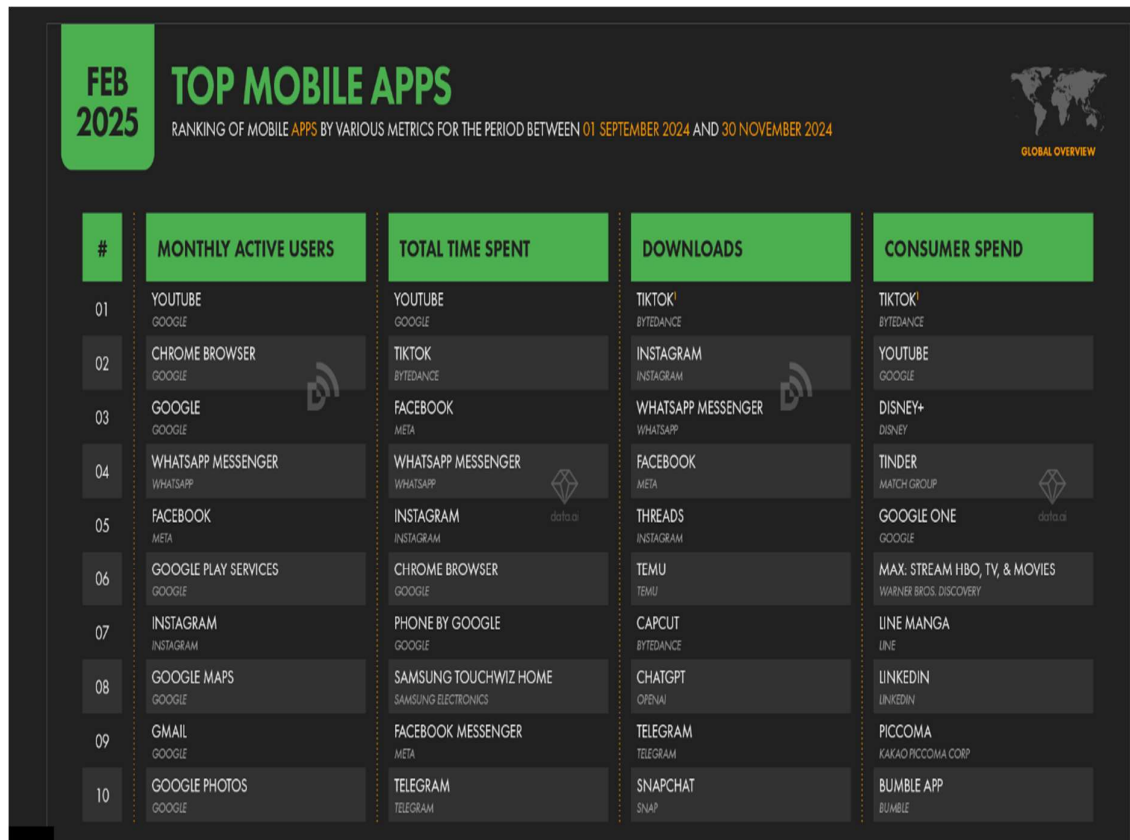

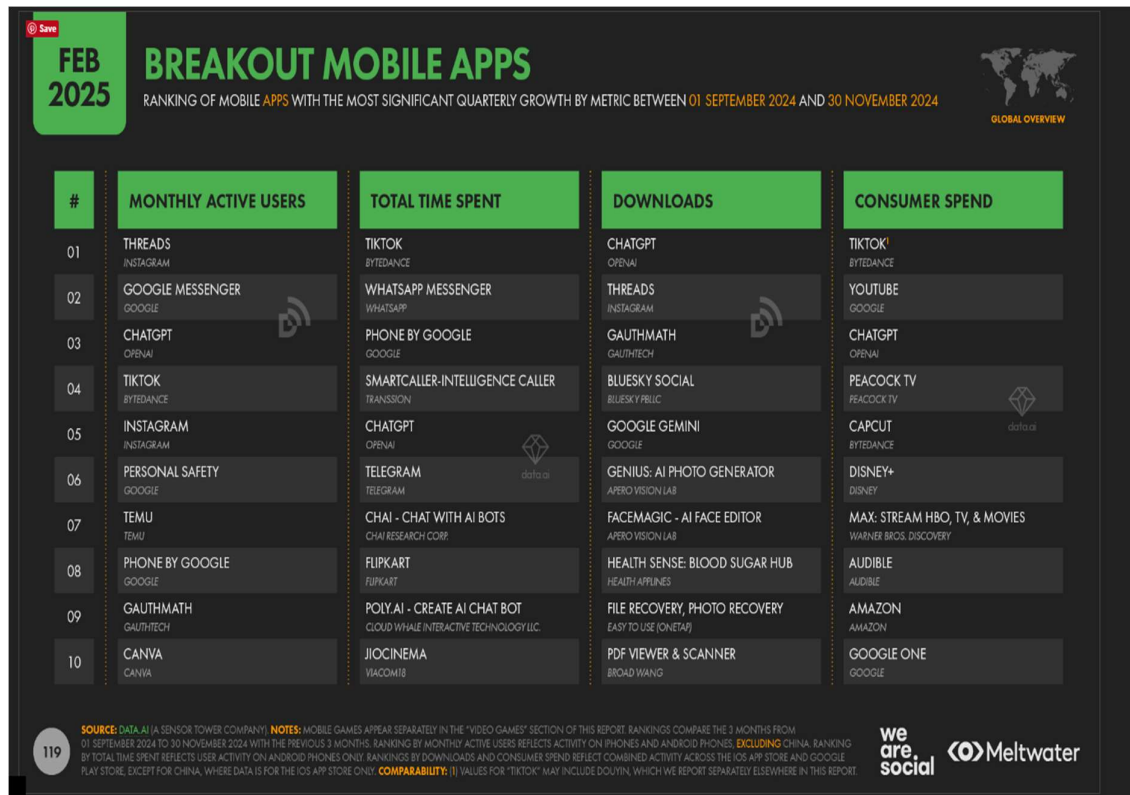

Indeed, the world spends almost twice as much time using YouTube as it spends using the platform's next nearest rival, TikTok.

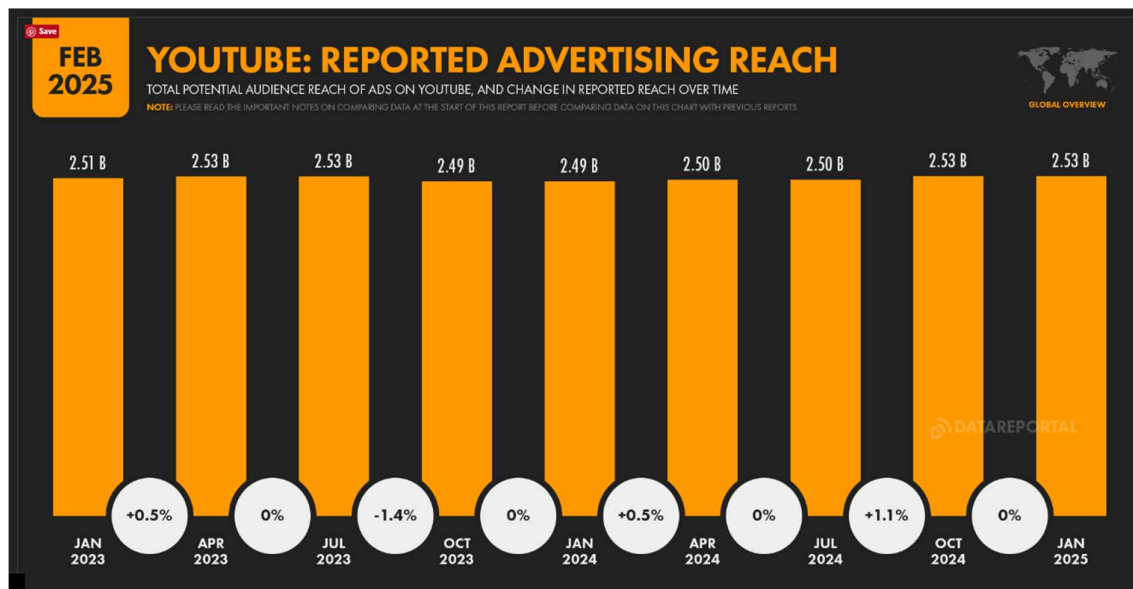

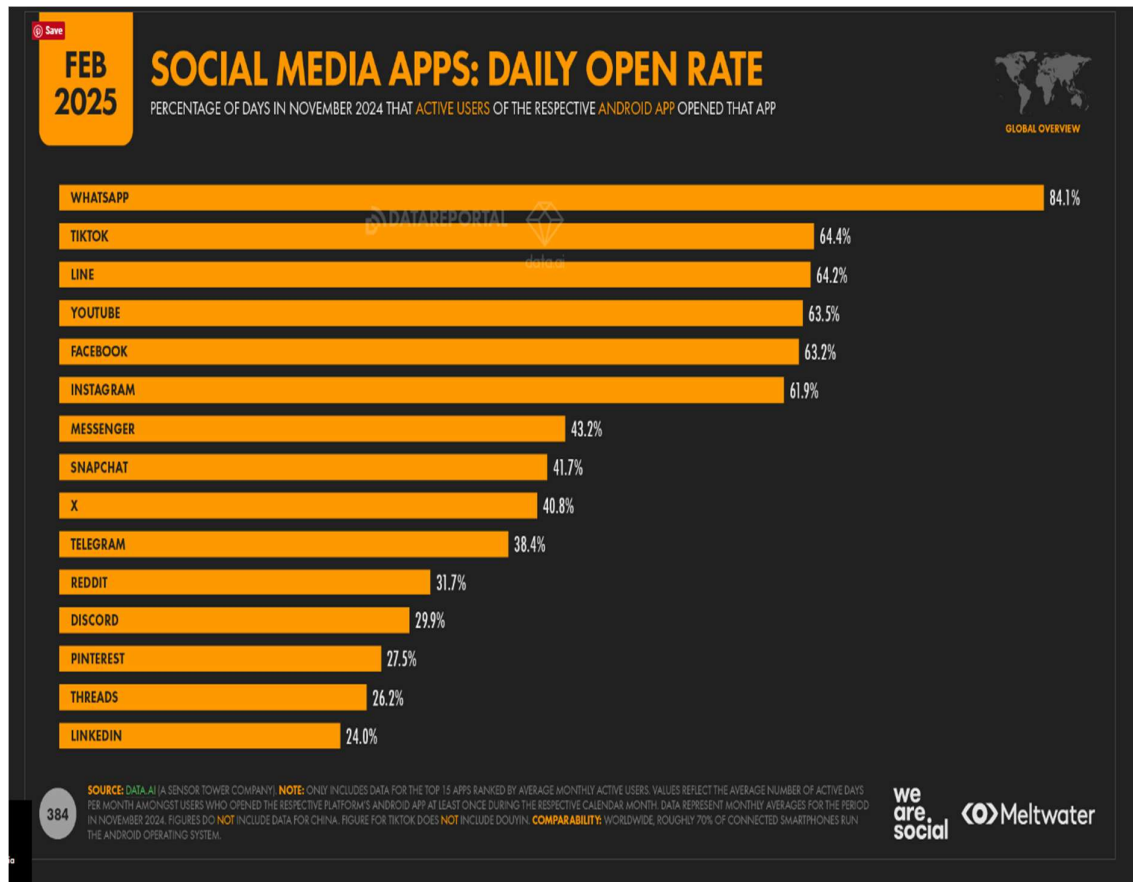

WhatsApp and Facebook rank third and fourth, respectively, with both platforms capturing roughly the same amount of total user time each month.

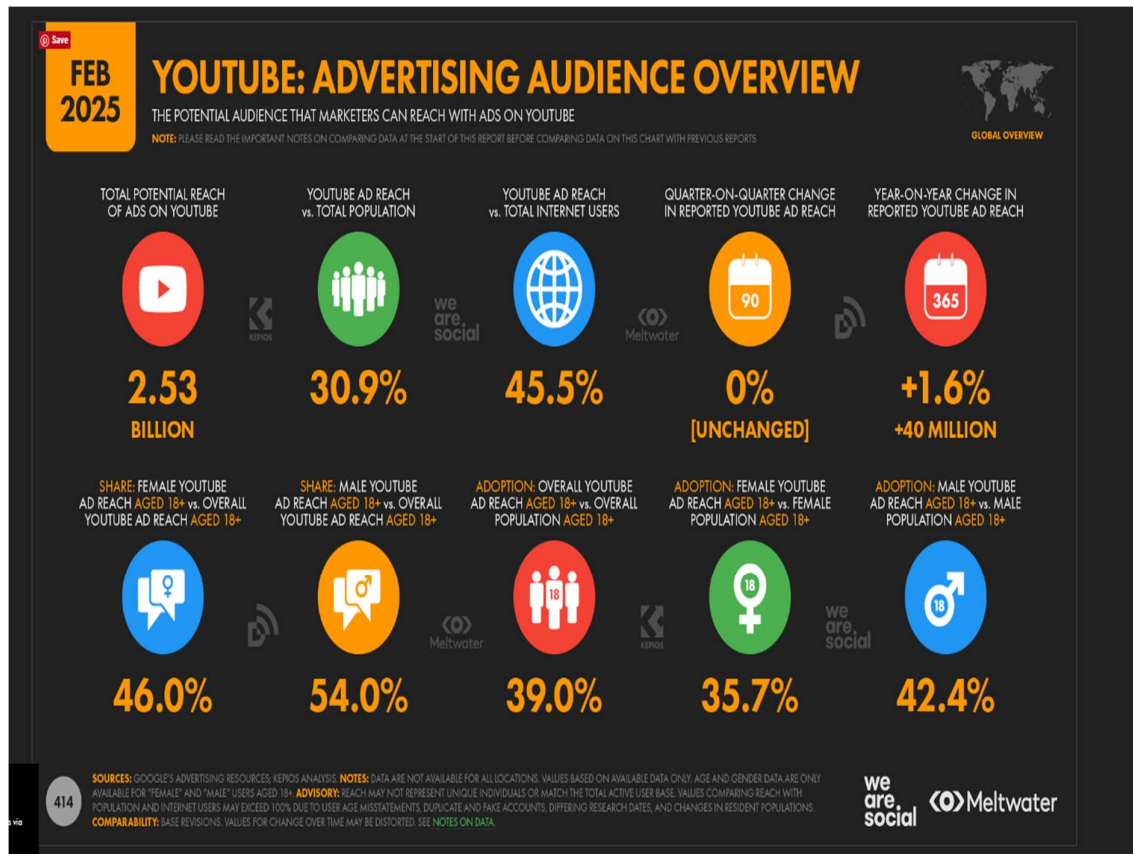

And Instagram places fifth, although the platform's total monthly user time is barely 42.5 percent that of top-ranked YouTube.

Now before you start investing in paid social for Twitter, you may want to know what's in it for you. The platform has a lot of potential with improved targeting capabilities and new ad formats. As such, advertising on the platform could exponentially grow your reach. So let's find out some of the top benefits of running ads on Twitter.

1. Potential to reach millions of users

According to the latest Twitter stats, the platform currently has 436 million monthly active users. Out of these, 237.8 million monetizable users use the app on a daily basis. That's millions of people you could potentially reach through your Twitter advertising efforts.

2. Objective-based ad campaigns

Twitter lets you optimize your ads toward your campaign objective. You get to choose from a variety of campaign objectives and Twitter will only bill you for actions that align with your chosen objective. In other words, your investment specifically goes towards achieving your goals.

3. Robust targeting capabilities

The Twitter ads manager offers a number of campaign targeting options. This allows you to fine-tune your ad targeting to reach only the most relevant users. At the most basic level, you can use demographics targeting to reach users based on:

- Geolocation
- Age
- Gender
- Language
- Device
- Carrier

For more advanced targeting, you can choose to display your ads to users based on:

- Conversations they participate in
- Events relevant to your audience

- Keywords they use
- Whether they've engaged with a specific Tweet from your brand
- The movies and TV shows they watch
- What their interests are
- Whether they share similar interests with your existing followers

Twitter even lets you create unique audience segments using off-platform customer information. The Custom Audiences feature allows you to create different audience groups to target, exclude or expand to.

4. Rise in Twitter ad engagement

Ad engagement on Twitter is growing. This speaks volumes about the impact of advertising on the platform. According to the latest reports, Twitter saw a 7% year-over-year increase in ad engagement in Q2 of 2022. If these trends continue, you can expect to launch ad campaigns that drive tons of engagement.

Types of Twitter ads

Twitter offers several choices in ad types. To run a successful advertising campaign on the platform, you need to decide which Twitter ad format will help you achieve your goals.

Promoted Ads

You might remember these as Promoted Tweets. They're a lot like regular Tweets, except Twitter shows them to people who aren't following your brand yet. They have a "Promoted" label at the bottom so users can differentiate them from organic Tweets.

Promoted

The best part is that you can use a variety of media formats to create these Promoted Ads. In addition to regular text and image Tweets, you can create ads using videos, carousels and Moments.

Follower Ads

Previously called Promoted Accounts, Follower Ads let you promote an entire Twitter account. It helps you target users who might be interested in your brand but aren't already following you. So it's the perfect ad type if you want to grow your Twitter following.

With this type of Twitter ad, your account will show up in the "Who to follow" section of a user's feed.

Twitter Amplify

With this option, brands can serve their ads through video content from highly relevant publishers. There are two ad formats to choose from:

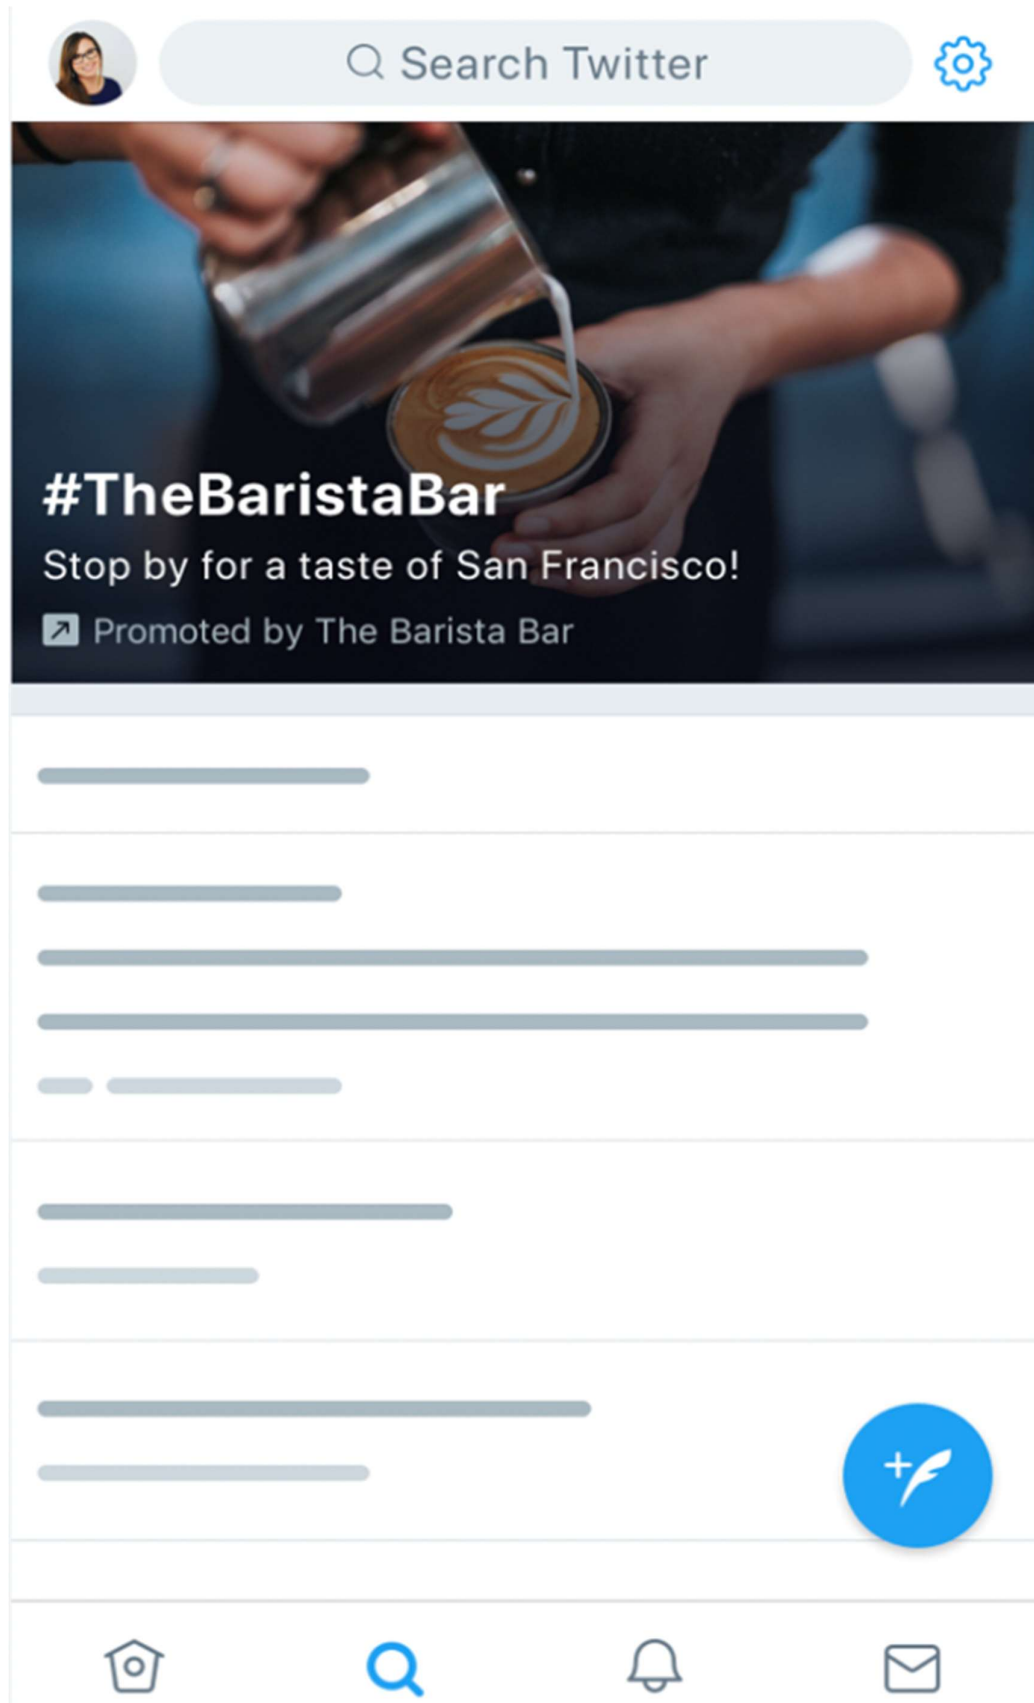

- Amplify Pre-roll, which lets you choose from 15+ categories of videos to serve your pre-roll video ad
- Amplify Sponsorships, which involves a one-on-one partnership with one specific publisher. Note that this option is currently not available for self-serve advertisers.

Twitter Takeover

These types of ads put your brand at the forefront with exclusive ownership of the platform's premium real estate. As you can guess, they're a lot more expensive than other Twitter ad formats. You can choose from two Takeover placements:

- Timeline Takeover, which ensures that your ad is the first one that someone sees when they open Twitter for the day

- Trend Takeover, which serves your ad alongside trending topics. Your ad will show up among topics in the Explore tab to drive conversations. Or you can even choose Trend Takeover+ for an immersive video experience.

Dynamic Product Ads (DPA)

These ads allow you to showcase your most relevant products to the right customers. With DPA Prospecting, you can acquire new customers by featuring products that are most relevant to them. Meanwhile, DPA Retargeting lets you feature products that people have engaged with on your website.

Collection Ads

As the name suggests, this type of ad lets you showcase a collection of product images in a single ad. Collection Ads feature a primary hero image on top of several small thumbnail images.

Best Practices in Video Marketing

Video marketing is not just about creating a video; it is about creating the right video for the right audience, platform, and marketing objective.

1. Define a clear objective 🎯

Before creating a video, decide what you want to achieve.

Examples:

- Increase brand awareness
- Generate leads
- Increase sales
- Educate customers
- Demonstrate a product
- Build customer trust
- Increase website traffic

Example: A smartphone company may create a demo video to increase product sales.

2. Know your target audience 👤

Create videos according to your audience's:

- Age
- Interests
- Problems/needs
- Language
- Online behavior
- Preferred social media platform

Example: A video for college students should use a different style from a video targeting senior citizens.

3. Keep the video short and engaging ⌚

People often have a short attention span online.

A good video should:

- Get to the point quickly
- Avoid unnecessary information
- Maintain viewer interest
- Deliver the main message clearly

Important: Short does not always mean better. The video should be as long as necessary and as short as possible.

4. Start with a strong Hook

The first few seconds are extremely important.

Instead of starting with:

"Hello everyone, today we are going to talk about..."

Start with something that creates curiosity:

"Are you wasting money on online advertising?"

Other hooks:

- Ask a question
- Show a surprising result
- Identify a problem
- Make an interesting statement
- Show the final result first

5. Tell a Story

People remember stories better than advertisements.

A simple structure is:

Problem → Solution → Result

Example:

Problem: "Our customers were spending hours manually preparing reports."

Solution: "Our software automates the entire process."

Result: "Now the report is ready in minutes."

6. Focus on Benefits, not only Features

Don't simply explain what the product has. Explain what the customer gets.

Feature	Benefit
5000 mAh battery	Use the phone throughout the day
108 MP camera	Capture detailed photos
Waterproof design	Use the device safely in rain

Rule:

Feature = What the product has

Benefit = How it helps the customer

7. Use high-quality visuals and audio

Good video quality improves professionalism.

Pay attention to:

- Good lighting
- Clear camera footage
- Clean background
- Good framing
- Clear voice
- Appropriate music
- Noise reduction

Audio quality is especially important. A viewer may tolerate average video quality, but poor audio can make them leave.

8. Add captions/subtitles

Many people watch videos without sound, particularly on social media.

Captions:

- Improve accessibility
- Help viewers understand the message
- Improve engagement

- Make videos easier to watch in public places

9. Optimize the video for the platform

Don't create one video and use exactly the same format everywhere.

Platform	Commonly suitable format
YouTube	Landscape / long-form + Shorts
Instagram	Reels / vertical
Facebook	Square or vertical + landscape
TikTok	Vertical
LinkedIn	Professional short-form video

Consider:

- Video dimensions
- Length
- Thumbnail
- Title
- Description
- Hashtags
- Audience behavior

10. Include a clear Call-to-Action (CTA) 📌

Tell viewers what they should do next.

Examples:

"Visit our website."

"Subscribe to our channel."

"Download the app."

"Book a free demo."

"Buy now."

"Contact us today."

A video without a CTA may generate views but fail to generate business results.

11. Create an attractive thumbnail

For platforms such as YouTube, the thumbnail can strongly influence whether people click.

A good thumbnail should:

- Be easy to understand
- Use a clear image
- Have limited text
- Create curiosity
- Match the actual video

Example:

❌ "Digital Marketing Video #5"

✅ "5 SEO Mistakes Killing Your Traffic!"

12. Optimize for Search (Video SEO)

Use relevant keywords in:

- Video title
- Description

- Tags/metadata where applicable
- Captions
- Thumbnail text where appropriate

Example:

Instead of:

"Our New Product"

Use:

"Best Budget Smartphone Under ₹20,000 – Full Product Review"

This helps users understand what the video is about and can improve discoverability.

13. Maintain consistent branding

Use consistent:

- Logo
- Colors
- Fonts
- Tone of voice
- Intro/outro style
- Brand message

This helps viewers recognize your brand across different videos and platforms.

14. Make videos mobile-friendly 📱

A large amount of social video consumption happens on mobile devices.

Therefore:

- Use readable text
 - Avoid tiny fonts
 - Use vertical formats when appropriate
 - Keep important information in the visible area
 - Make subtitles easy to read

15. Promote the video

Publishing the video is only the beginning.

Promote it through:

- YouTube
- Instagram
- Facebook
- LinkedIn
- WhatsApp
- Email marketing
- Website/blog
- Paid advertising

You can also repurpose one long video into several Shorts/Reels, social posts and blog content.

16. Encourage interaction

Ask viewers to:

- Like
- Comment
- Share
- Subscribe
- Ask questions
- Participate in polls

Example:

"Which digital marketing strategy would you like us to explain next? Tell us in the comments."

17. Analyze video performance 📺

Don't judge a video only by its number of views.

Important metrics include:

Metric	What it tells you
Views	How many times the video was viewed
Watch Time	Total time people spent watching
Average View Duration	How long viewers watched on average
Retention	Where viewers stop watching
Engagement	Likes, comments and shares
CTR	How many people clicked after seeing the thumbnail/title
Conversions	How many viewers completed the desired action

Example:

A video with 10,000 views and 20 sales may be more valuable than one with 100,000 views and 0 sales, depending on the campaign objective.
